Speaker Bio

Kristel Kriel

Kristél provides practical and strategic advice to public and private organizations across all industries on privacy, cybersecurity and freedom of information laws, including matters such as interpretation, compliance, policy development, education, training and risk management as well as incident response. She helps organizations implement creative solutions for privacy issues affecting their customers and workplaces. Kristél also provides strategic advice to organizations on provincial and federal access requests and complaints, as well as reviews by privacy regulators across Canada.

Kristél has helped clients develop innovative and effective privacy compliance programs and manage and respond to a full range of privacy incidents, and regularly assists clients with cybersecurity compliance and breach coaching.

With respect to technology, clients look to Kristél for practical advice on a number of transactions, developing policies (such as social media, acceptable use, and bring your own device policies), and structuring a range of agreements including services, development, support/maintenance and licensing. As the world becomes increasingly digital, Kristél also regularly advises clients on matters relating to online operations such as e-commerce and electronic contracting, terms of use, copyright, online marketing and contests, as well as domain name disputes.

Kristél also acts as a third-party privacy officer, providing a wide range of cybersecurity and data privacy services.
